Figure 5.3  The Structure of a Static Black Hole
A black hole consists of an event horizon surrounding a singularity. At the event horizon, gravity is so strong that nothing — not even light — can escape from the hole. Inside the event horizon, the intensity of gravity and curvature of spacetime continue to increase right up to the singularity. At the singularity, there is infinite curvature of spacetime.